Introduction

'City pride' is essentially about individuals and organisations taking pride in their city including:

- > how it looks
- > its unique physical, social and cultural traits
- > the way people interact and get on with each other
- > how others perceive their city.

Having pride in your city is likely to engender feelings of satisfaction with your living environment, a strong sense of belonging and a desire to contribute to shaping and improving your community.

Building city pride relies on the collective actions of individuals – who live, work, own property or a business in the area – in taking responsibility and positively working towards enhancing the city's social, environmental and economic capital.

Councils can play a pivotal role in building city pride by:

- > Promoting and celebrating the human and physical assets of their community;
- > Demonstrating the type of actions they would like others in the community to adopt in caring for and improving their city; and
- > Encouraging and supporting individuals and organisations to take action in shaping and improving their community.

The City of Salisbury is committed to strengthening city pride.

The City of Salisbury's Living City Strategy aims to deliver one of four key directions of the Salisbury City Plan 2020 of "encouraging and supporting a thriving and connected community". It contributes to Objective 2 of the Living City Strategy: To have an engaged community with a strong sense of vitality, pride and belonging recognising that:

Inclusion, participation, a sense of belonging and ownership in community affairs are central to community and civic vitality. The City of Salisbury is committed to providing a broad range of opportunities for participation and engagement that allows for sharing of knowledge, values and activities which contribute to the strengthening of community ties, fosters community resilience and builds community pride.

This document outlines key strategies and actions to build and strengthen city pride. Many are already being undertaken across the City and the plan identifies new opportunities to be rolled out over the next few years.

Assets Based Community Development

The Council currently invests a significant amount of resources in maintaining the public realm. The City Pride strategy provides an opportunity through an assets based community development approach (ABCD) to encourage greater community involvement in how the public realm is improved to meet community needs as well as supporting and encouraging the maintenance and beautification of the private realm

Traditionally community development has taken a needs based approach. Local organisations rely on external institutions to deliver "services" and leads to the notion that "only outside experts can provide real help". Funding is made available on the basis of categories of needs rather which leads to fragmentation of efforts and weakens neighbour-to-neighbour links.

ABCD is a resilience planning tool and recognises that the community already knows "the answer" and is "the expert". At the core of ABCD is "asset mapping" which is used to identify the role of people assets (individuals and groups) and built assets to drive social and economic change. It involves local government and agencies 'leading by stepping back', so that communities and marginalised people shift from being 'consumers' of services to 'designers' of community programs, and, finally 'producers' and 'enablers' of community.

Communities that grow strong are internally focused and have built an inventory of their assets and have come to see value in resources that would otherwise have been ignored, unrealised, or dismissed. Such unrealised resources include not only personal attributes and skills, but also the relationships among people through social, kinship, or associational networks. By mobilising these informal networks, formal institutional resources can be activated - such as local government, formal community-based organisations, and private enterprise.

ABCD rests on the principle that the recognition of strengths, gifts, talents and assets of individuals and communities is more likely to inspire positive action for change than an exclusive focus on needs and problems. People are seen as engines of community action, and as a source of power and leadership, these are considered assets of the community.

The benefit of ABCD led initiatives is that community solutions tend to be simple, low cost, owned by the community and sustainable. Local Government can add power to change that is driven by the community. Local Governments' role in supporting ABCD can be as legislator, facilitator, enabler and seed funder – it may have a seat at the table, without having to be the leader. By taking this approach, Local Government does not have to employ a one-size-fits-all approach to community development.

The City Pride Strategy introduces some elements of ABCD in strategies that will empower the community to be agents of sustainable change and improvement.

Desired Outcomes and Observable Changes

As listed below, enhanced city pride would be evident in both how the local community and the external community perceive and experience the City of Salisbury. A number of the desired observable changes align with corporate indicators identified in the Living City Strategy.

Desired outcomes	Observable changes	Corporate indicators
Community members of the City of Salisbury (including ratepayers, residents, workers, property owners) have pride in: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> > the City’s natural and built environment > their fellow citizens and how the community interacts and functions > how the external community sees the City. The perception of the City of Salisbury and its occupants is substantially increased amongst the wider community of Adelaide and South Australia.	Community members of the City of Salisbury (including ratepayers, residents, workers, property owners): <ul style="list-style-type: none"> > feel proud to say they live, work or own property in the City > take responsibility for the appearance of their respective residential and business properties > treat the City’s natural and built environment with respect > actively participate in engagement processes and projects to improve the public realm > know their neighbours and are willing to lend a hand in need > value and celebrate the cultural diversity of the community > are actively involved in the life of the community > see and hear positive stories about the City in local and state-wide media 	Liveability <ul style="list-style-type: none"> > Perceptions of Quality of Life > Perception of Quality of Open Space Engagement and Participation <ul style="list-style-type: none"> > Number of Volunteer Hours > Voting in Elections > Participation in Decision-making Forums

The biennial Community Perceptions survey will also measure longitudinal changes in attitudes, behaviours and community perceptions as a result of an improved level of city pride. Relevant questions/indicators include:

- > What attracted you to live in the City of Salisbury
- > What are the strengths of City of Salisbury
- > How often are you involved in community activities (this covers council and other local events, festivals, visits to recreation centres, community centres, libraries, seniors centres
- > Satisfaction with quality of life elements. This covers aspects such as :

- affordable housing
 - job opportunities
 - the range of community groups and social clubs
 - having a diverse community
 - access to good shopping opportunities
 - recreational areas
 - parks and reserves, walkways and trails
 - having a sense of community
 - streets, verges, footpaths and general cleanliness of streets
 - managing the local environment sustainably
- > How could quality of life be improved

Objectives, Strategies and Critical Actions

To achieve these desired outcomes, the City of Salisbury will take a leadership role in fostering opportunities to work collaboratively with City ratepayers, residents, traders and organisation to:

1. Improve the amenity and visual appearance of the City
2. Strengthen social networks and community cohesion
3. Promote the merits of the City as a great place to live, work and play.

Strategies and critical actions to achieve these three objectives are elaborated below.

Objective 1

To improve the amenity and visual appearance of the City

We want to engender community pride in the City's natural and built environment so that community members treat the environment with respect, are actively engaged in improving the appearance of the public realm as well as taking responsibility for the appearance of their own property.

Improving the physical appearance of our City—both public and private environments is also likely to:

- > engender increased self-worth: individuals are likely to feel better about themselves and where they live, work and/or own property
- > enhance the external perception of our City and its occupants.
